The construction season is in full bloom in Platte County and citizens are continuing to take advantage of the temporary building permit fee waiver program. The Platte County Commission approved the new economic incentive in March. Permits have been issued for decks, sheds, room additions, pools, pole barns and several single-family dwellings. The County Commission noted the success of the program. “Citizens have definitely taken advantage of this opportunity to reinvest in their homes ,” said the County Commission. To date, 97 building permits have been issued and $34,000 in fees have been waived. The program has been very successful in meeting the goal of generating investment and economic activity in Platte County. Citizens still have a limited time to take advantage of this great opportunity. The program will close when the total amount of building permit fees waived reaches $45,000 or when the time limit expires on August 31, 2011.
